The teen was riding a bike at 52 Street and Temple Drive NE when hit, suffering severe leg and head injuries, according to EMS.

Calgary police could not confirm reports that the injured youth was not wearing a helmet, was listening to a music playing device and that the pedestrian crossing lights were not activated when he was struck.

Murder-suicide stuns friends of 'regular guy'

By NEIL MACKINNON
Metro Calgary

While Ottawa police continued their investigation last night into Saturday's apparent murder-suicide, friends of Calgary Ryan Sawchuk were astonished the "regular guy" they knew could be a suspected killer.

Wes Jardine, Sawchuk's occasional defence partner on both the Calgary Beefcakes and Vipers summer hockey squads, said the 28-year-old Calgarian was a skilled player, a joker, easygoing and a guy he never would have thought capable of violence against his fiancée, Alicia Bateman.

"He was a regular guy, no demons, no issues that anyone was aware of anyway," Jardine said yesterday.

Friends and family in Calgary were stunned by the news.

deaths in Ontario

» Autopsies on the bodies of Bateman and Sawchuk, both age 28, were conducted in Kingston, Ont. yesterday to officially determine causes of death after both were discovered in an Orleans home following an emergency call. Metro confirmed reports that Bateman had been strangled in the garage of her home at 302 Cote Royale Crescent, while Sawchuk was found in the home, hanging from a noose.

"We're all still struggling to find out what went wrong," Jardine said.

Sawchuk, 28, was "an outgoing" and "very nice young man," who was "madly in love" with Bateman, according to his grandmother, Mary Sawchuk.

A relative of Bateman's said the family was "devastated" but not prepared to talk when contacted by Metro yesterday.

Making the world a better place just got easier for 28 Calgarian students, who won a Millennium Excellence Award in a national competition for post-secondary entrance scholarships as thanks for their contributions to the community.

Grade 12 student Jane Wu, a national winner who will receive up to $20,000 towards her education, attends John G. Diefenbaker High School.

"For the Canadian Millennium Foundation to recognize me," Wu said. "That's a very flattering experience."

Wu plans to go to Queen's University and take a double major in commerce and environmental science. She's grateful for financial help, but for the application process, too.

"It's really difficult to write about your motivations, but it really forced me to ask myself why I do this stuff," she said.

Wu is a student representative to the Calgary Chinese Painting Association Board and helps promote Chinese arts and culture. She also initiated and organized the 2006 Beauty and Brains Conference, aimed at exploring non-traditional careers in entrepreneurship, science and engineering and raising money for the Calgary Women's Shelter, and is chair and leading member of the Calgary Youth Foundation.

"Balance is still something I struggle with," she said, but her day-timer is her best friend.

Outstanding students who have distinguished themselves by their community involvement were awarded one of the three local, provincial, or national prizes. Local winners will receive a one-time $4,000 award and provincial winners a renewable $4,000 award up to $16,000.

"If you can bring together all these people, there are incomprehensible heights that can be reached," she said.

Taliban fight flawed: Karzai

Afghan leader criticizes West's war effort

International forces in Afghanistan have mismanaged the fight against the Taliban, leading to a rise in violence, and now risk losing people's goodwill, President Hamid Karzai told an Indian news channel.

Karzai has often criticized the Western conduct of the war in Afghanistan, saying civilian casualties must stop.

In turn, the president, who wants to stand for re-election next year, is often criticized at home for being overly influenced by the United States and Britain.

In an interview that aired on Indian television yesterday, he said foreign troops had failed to go after "the sanctuaries of the terrorists" which Afghan officials say exist over the border in Pakistan.

Karzai did not directly mention Pakistan but the Afghan government has said that the West should have done more to crack down on Taliban and al Qaeda bases in Pakistan.

"It was a serious neglect of that, in spite of our warning," he told CNBC TV 18, adding that other former members of the Taliban who had given up arms were unfairly hunted down within Afghan territory.

Karzai

"Some of the Taliban who have laid down their arms, who are living in the Afghan villages peacefully, who have accepted Afghanistan's new order, they were chased, they were hunted for no reason, and they were forced to flee the country."

Ousted from power in 2001 by U.S.-led and Afghan forces, the Taliban has vowed to topple the Afghan government and drive out the foreign troops who back it.

Brazil cops involved in torture: Report

Off-duty officers part of 'militias'

Brazilian authorities believe active police officers are involved in a Rio de Janeiro paramilitary group accused of torturing four people, including two journalists, with beatings and electric shocks.

The journalists made the allegation Sunday in their O Dia newspaper, saying they, along with their driver and a

Such groups, often referred to as "militias" locally, are normally made up of off-duty or former police officers. They have spread in the city's violence-plagued slums in recent years.

No lack of oil, says Shell CEO

Exec echoes OPEC, saying market is well-supplied

Royal Dutch Shell Chief Executive Jeroen van der Veer said yesterday he did not see any shortage of physical oil supplies, echoing the view of many OPEC ministers who say the world market is well-supplied.

Oil prices have risen more than fourfold since 2004 and gained about a third this year, partly on increased fears among investors that producers will struggle to produce enough oil to meet demand in a decade's time.

"There are no physical shortages in the world. We don't have ships waiting in

Pens extend series in triple OT

Petr Sykora nets winner to keep series alive

PENGUINS 4 RED WINGS 3 (3OT)

They played almost 110 minutes of heart-thumping, tension filled playoff hockey. Now, they'll play more.

Three overtimes of Stanley Cup final action last night at The Joe did not produce in the result the hometown audience desired and screamed for all night long. Instead, Petr Sykora, nearly invisible for the first four games of the 2008 Cup final, delivered the winner at 9:57 of the third OT to produce a 4-3 Pittsburgh victory over the Red Wings, sending the best-of-seven series back to Pennsylvania for Game 6 tomorrow night.

For the final half of regulation play and for three overtimes, it was Detroit relentlessly pelting heroic Pittsburgh netminder Marc-Andre Fleury with shot after shot, while the Penguins could manage only occasional forays into the Detroit zone.

The night, you should know, certainly hadn't started that way.

It began with the Wings inexplicably sluggish and mistake prone. But it was 1-0 nine minutes into the game for the Penguins on a quick-wristed shot by a stationary Marian Hossa, then 2-0 for the white-clad visitors before the game was 15 minutes old after Niklas Kronwall inadvertently flipped the puck off the shaft of Chris Osgood's stick into the Detroit net.

Gradually, however, the Wings began to assert themselves, and a Darren Helm shot that glanced off the skate of a sliding Rob Scuderi skittered between the legs of Pittsburgh goalie Fleury and cut the Penguin lead in half, 2-1.

Finally, the Wings tied the game 2-2 on a Pavel Datsyuk deflection, his first goal of the series.

Less than three minutes later, they scored again on a wrist shot by Brian Detroit Red Wings Pavel Datsyuk shoots the puck off the crossbar past Pittsburgh Penguins goalie Marc-Andre Fleury during Game 5 of the 2008 NHL Stanley Cup final last night. The Pens won 4-3 in triple overtime.

Rafalski, and suddenly the Cup seemed to have one Detroit hand and two fingers on it.

Lakers are odds-on favourite for NBA title

This season's Boston Celtics recorded the largest one-year improvement in NBA history (24-58 to 66-16), but they are long shots to win what counts most — the league's championship.

Odds-makers have established Kobe Bryant and the Los Angeles Lakers as heavy favourites over the Celts in the NBA Finals, which opens Thursday night.

The Lakers are $1.95 favourites, meaning wagers who take them must lay that much to win a dollar. If the Celts prevail, bettors would collect $1.65 for every dollar they place on them.

Watch and learn

Volunteers help to assess ecosystems

If you're looking to make a difference in your local environment, consider taking part in the NatureWatch program.

NatureWatch is a series of community-based programs, partnered between Nature Canada and Environment Canada's Ecological Monitoring and Assessment Network co-ordination office. In the programs, Environment Canada collects information on ecosystems and their plants and animals across the country to better understand how stressors such as global warming, acid rain and invasive species impact them, according to the website.

Currently, the series is divided up into four programs (details below):

FrogWatch

ENVIRONMENT Canada speculates on its website that frogs and toads are particularly vulnerable to damage caused by pollution because they have semi-permeable skin and they live between water and land. They also act as an indicator species for the health of Canada's wetlands — environments that are integral to the country's biodiversity and natural health.

IceWatch

emissions is common knowledge, more information is needed about how climate change will impact different regions of Canada, and how ecosystems in those regions will react to that change. Ice cover can profoundly affect water temperature and chemistry, food supplies, trade, tourism and the breeding seasons and migration patterns of birds.

PlantWatch

SPECIES OF PLANTS are blooming almost a month earlier than they were a century ago, scientists say, and they add global warming and climate change are largely to blame. The greatest increases in temperature are predicted for the West and the North.

Volunteers in this program track where and how fast the changes are taking place, and they learn more about the country's botanical diversity.

WormWatch

THIS PROGRAM uses earthworms to get a better grasp of how soil ecology sustains agriculture and the environment. Hands-on learning activities promote knowledge of the ground beneath us, and are key elements in collecting data used for a national earthworm census.

problems.

- » When boating, avoid stirring up bottom sediment with propellers. Keep personal watercraft out of shallow areas that are critical habitat for spawning fish, aquatic plants, and aquatic invertebrates.
- » Hunters and anglers should use non-lead shot and fishing gear so birds eating spent shot or lost sinkers will not be poisoned.

Hostess who saves most

Keep parties chic while cheap

Q Dear Smart Cookies, I recently started reading your weekly column and love it. You always provide such great advice and I am hopeful that you can help me out as well. Next month I am hosting a dinner party for six of my closest girlfriends. I am looking for ways that I can show everyone a great time without going broke in the process. Thoughts? - AU R.

A This weekend we hopped from one Sex And The City party to another, searching for great martinis and creative tips on how to throw an unforgettable get-together that your guests will think cost you a fortune (it was hard work but someone had to do it!) and here's what we uncovered.

SMART COOKIES
www.smartcookies.com

DRINKS: If you're serving wine, buy a less expensive (but tasty) boxed wine and then put it in a beautiful decanter. Don't you worry, your guests will never know the difference and you'll be richer for it. You will save up to 25 per cent. And to stretch your wine even further, consider serving Sangria, which can be made with inexpensive white or reds, along with soda, fruit, juices and brandy.

Or better yet, rather than serving wine, serve hard liquor. A 750 ml bottle of wine will pour 6 drinks, while a 26 oz. bottle of vodka will serve 26 drinks. DINNER: For dinner parties, hit up your local farmer's market or ethnic market for fruits, veggies and even meats. You will spend a fraction of what you would pay at a large grocery chain. We found beef tenderloin at the local grocery store for $49.47 and we were able to get the same cut of meat at our local butcher for $35.97 — 28 per cent less!

If cooking gourmet specialty items is your thing, test out a local cooking studio where you can prep your meal ahead of time.

These trendy studios include all ingredients and cooking supplies: Cost average is about $5 per serving. DESSERT: Don't be shy. When your guests ask if they can bring something, your answer should always be "yes"! Dessert is a great item to suggest your guests bring. But whether it's a dessert, an appetizer, or a bottle of wine, don't be afraid to ask because your guests will be glad to contribute.

Bon appétit!

Global health care

Patients may soon direct their own treatment

You prick your finger, put a few drops of blood in a vial, put it in an envelope and mail the package to a lab in Georgia.

In a few days, you check a secure website and find out if you have diabetes, or heart troubles or even cancer.

If you decide you need a doctor, you call a 24-hour help line staffed with physicians in India — a centre modelled on computer help centres operating there now — for advice on what care to get.

Then all you have to decide is which country you want the surgery to be done in.

There was no shortage of blue-sky thinking at a recent medical tourism conference in Las Vegas.

All the predictions about the future shared two basic conclusions: Patients will become consumers directing their own care, and health care will soon be as globalized as manufacturing.

"Personally, I think the long term economy is going to be about multi-national health care corporations ... with facilities in North America and Asia," says Jason Yap, head of the Singapore Tourist Board's medical tourism office. "And patients will be sent to where resources are best deployed."

That's basically how consumer goods are manufactured today, and the doctors and entrepreneurs attending the Health Care Globalization Summit saw no reason health care would be any different.

In fact, Vishal Bali, who runs a chain of hospitals in India, says the future is largely already here. His Wockhardt Hospitals, for instance, already have a 24-hour call centre.

Like Yap, Bali foresees a day when only minor procedures are done in the more expensive industrialized nations, while major surgery is conducted in developing countries where costs are lower. In India, for instance, bypass surgery can cost $10,000, compared with more than $100,000 in the U.S.

Patients will become consumers directing their own health care, according to experts at a recent medical tourism conference in Las Vegas.

"It all boils down to cost savings," Bali says.

Dr. Brian Day, head of the Canadian Medical Association, foresees a day when Canada could be a medical tourism destination, once waiting lists are eliminated here.

"I think we can come within a few thousand dollars of those Indian prices," says Day, who was not at the Vegas conference.

Computer companies are getting in on the act, as well. AOL co-founder Steve Case

As the medical tourism industry matures, it has begun to specialize. Here is a breakdown of some of the destinations, and their specialties:

» Latin America: Cosmetic surgery and dental work, traditionally targeting the U.S. market.

» Singapore: High-end luxury health care, traditionally targeting Asian upper classes, but now branching out to North America and Europe.

» South Korea: Targeting the growing Chinese middle class not yet able to afford Singapore, as well as the Japanese and U.S. markets.

» India: A high-volume destination, India stresses economies of scale and low prices.

Concerns have arisen over the safety of various perspiration products. Look for paraben-, aluminum salt-, and/or scent-free.

Sweat education

From the editors of alive magazine; alive.metro@alive.com

An old euphemism says, "Horses sweat, men perspire, and women glow." Whatever we choose to call it — sweat, perspiration, or a healthy glow — the body's cooling mechanism is truly ingenious.

Sweat, essentially odourless, can become rather pungent once exposed to bacteria. A sizeable industry has grown to address people's concerns about body odour, and a wide variety of products are available to help guard us against perspiration.

What do these products do exactly?

» Antiperspirants work by blocking sweat ducts, thereby reducing sweat production. They may also contain ingredients to inhibit bacteria growth.

Deodorants help prevent or reduce body odour, without reducing sweating. Some combination of fragrances, antibacterial ingredients, and ingredients that change the pH of the underarm area (making it a less hospitable place for bacteria to live) is usually included.

Are there risks?

» Concerns have arisen over aluminum salts — found in some antiperspirants — and their relation to Alzheimer's disease, and whether underarm products containing parabens can increase breast cancer risk.

Research has yet to provide conclusive evidence to support these fears. Nonetheless, certain ingredients do have consumers concerned, not only for their own well-being but also for the environment, into which tons of personal-care product chemicals are washed every year.

400 dates documented

If the recent hype over Sex And The City: The Movie has taught us anything, it's that in a world of sex, love and confusion, many of us look for inspiration on sorting out our relationships from wherever we can get it.

However, the best lessons about the opposite sex often come from real life experiences — from the horrifying dates that make us swear off dating to the exhilarating ones that bring us back to it.

With more than 400 first dates from a three-and-a-half year time frame in her arsenal, Carissa Reiniger is familiar with both the ups and downs of dating and all that exists in between.

"One guy brought me apple butter on the first date," she laughs. "He gave it to me because he said he thought I was the kind of girl who would like apple butter."

I wonder if a second date would have gotten her a loaf of bread to accompany the sweet treat.

Other memorable moments from her dating life thus far include the hopeless romantic who showed up for their casual date in a full suit with a dozen roses, the man who spent the evening desperately trying to convince her he was a brain surgeon, and a guy who waited until the end of their great date to mention he had a girlfriend.

It's stories like these that made the 25-year-old entrepreneur, who grew up in Edmonton but now lives in Toronto, parlay her own experiences as well as countless more from other women into a book called Stories From Our Black Books.

"There are so many books and plays and movies based on fiction, trying to come up with all of these crazy stories that people think are interesting enough to create material out of. But I think fact is a thousand times more interesting than fiction," says Reiniger on why she's brought these stories from women on love and dating to the forefront.

One story that sticks out in Reiniger's mind is the woman who waited excitedly for her date to pick her up ... until she saw the four dead coyotes in the back of his truck.

But more than the entertainment value these stories have is the truths about relationships we can all glean from them.

"So many women are on the search for love, but the reality is I don't think you can be in a good relationship until you are in a good place as an individual," says Reiniger. "It is a journey for everyone. If we're in a relationship that's not good the only person who can change that is ourselves, or if we're in a relationship that's great the only person who can keep it that way is ourselves."

Kasia Iglinski is a journalist who enjoys her work and her dating life. Armed with a notepad and a curious mind, she's always on the prowl for a good story and a good date.

Major shows set to return

CTV rolls out its fall lineup

By SANDY CAETANO
for Metro Calgary

It was an evening of glitz and glamour as CTV rolled out the red carpet and pulled out the big guns, offering all those in attendance at their 2008 Upfront Presentation sneak peaks of their new fall season lineup.

In addition to a look at their new fall 2008 schedule, journalists, media executives, advertising partners and other TV bigwigs got to schmooze at Toronto's Four Seasons Centre for the Performing Arts with all the stars.

Stars at the event included Enrico Colantoni (Just Shoot Me, Veronica Mars), Amy Jo Johnson (Felicity, What About Brian), Hugh Dillon (Durham County), Mary Murphy (So You Think You Can Dance Canada, guest judge), Dan Karaty (So You Think You Can Dance Canada, guest judge), and Leah Miller (So You Think You Can Dance Canada, host). Also on hand performing her hit Seven Day Fool was Canadian Idol's newest member, R&B singer Jullly Black.

CTV announced their fall lineup along with the first ever cross-country, Fall

Four sevenths of the principal cast of Corner Gas at the CTV 2008 Upfront presentation at the Four Seasons Centre in Toronto, the last for the group, whose show begins its final season in the fall.

2008 Schedule for "A" (formerly A-Channel).

The two schedules will complement each other featuring Canada's most-watched programs, breakthrough freshmen hits and seven, new big buzz series.

The announcement comes as CTV ends the 2007/08 broadcast season as Canada's No. 1 network among total viewers for the seventh consecutive year.

A total of 18 of Canada's Top 20 shows will be returning to CTV and A - Terminator: The Sarah Connor Chronicles, Grey's Anatomy, ER, Lost, CSI: NY, Criminal Minds, Law & Order, Desperate Housewives and more.

"CTV has the most stable schedule in North American broadcasting. Nevertheless, as we did during the strike, we will continue to engage viewers with fresh new content in the few openings we have available," said Susanne Boyce, President, Creative, Content and Channels, CTV Inc.

Two of the seven new series include Flashpoint, the Canadian-produced series to be simulcast with CBS, and the world premiere of The Listener, the Canadian-produced series airing in the U.S. on NBC and in 175 other countries. The others are So You Think You Can Dance Canada, Fringe, The Mentalist, Eleventh Hour and Star Wars: The Clone Wars, a new series from Lucasfilm Animation.

O'Neal busted for drugs

Oscar-winning actress Tatum O'Neal, the former child star who chronicled her struggles with addiction in a 2004 memoir, has been arrested on suspicion of buying drugs on the streets of New York City.

A judge released her on her own recognizance yesterday after she spent the night in jail and she was ordered to return on July 28. O'Neal, 44, appeared without makeup, her hair tied into a messy bun, wearing a black tank top and black pants.

She was charged with criminal possession of a controlled substance.

The New York Daily News reported she was caught buying crack cocaine from a homeless street vendor on Sunday night three blocks from her home.

O'Neal's publicist declined to comment and her lawyer left the courtroom without speaking to reporters.

In her memoir A Paper Life, O'Neal wrote that her addiction to heroin in 1995 led to her losing custody of her children, the Daily News reported.

Ferrell takes aim at '70s

Semi-Pro: Let's Get Sweaty Edition

Stars: Will Ferrell, Woody Harrelson

Distributor: Alliance DVD

THE '70S IS a gift that keeps on giving for Will Ferrell, a comic Narnia to which the comedian seems destined to keep returning to for inspiration. With Semi-Pro, Ferrell and director Kent Alterman baste the underdog sports picture in a thick coating of the '70s, a not altogether pleasurable marinade that refers liberally to ugly clothes, creepy sex, nasty drugs and the last guiltless public embrace of drinking as well as smoking.

Ferrell plays Jackie

Moon, an indifferently talented musician who, in true '70s style, made a fortune off a one-hit wonder, and used the earnings to make himself an owner, coach and player of an American Basketball Association franchise team based out of his hometown of Flint, Mich., a luckless, last-place outfit better known for its flamboyant promotions than scoring.

He thinks his dreams have come true when the league merges with the NBA, but the catch is only the top four teams will make it, so he trades the team's washing machine for the only player willing to come to Flint and try to give the team a shot at coveted fourth place, a washed-up bench jockey played by Woody Harrelson.

The film is typical Ferrell, at its best during a couple of ensemble set pieces and when the star gives full reign to his love of humiliation, but it's motivated by an obvious love for the flashy, dopey antics of the ABA, with its red, white and blue ball and high-scoring play.

In a bonus feature devoted to the long-gone league, we learn how much the modern NBA owes to its dirty little brother, and how much of the ABA's shameless style was absorbed into the basketball mainstream, from half-time court shows to slam-dunking.

Putting King out to pasture

TWILIGHT OF THE GODS:

Well, I'm glad to read that CNN is at least contemplating the possibility of a day without Larry King on their network.

You know it's summer when most of the news you get arrives in the form of rumour — in this case, speculation that the network will be offering King's chair and red suspenders to Jay Leno when the time finally comes for the 74-year-old host of Larry King Live to retire.

Leno, as we know, is leaving The Tonight Show next year, his bosses at NBC having decided to transplant Conan O'Brien from the East to West Coast and into an earlier time slot in the search for younger demographics. Leno isn't exactly happy about it, and he's been quietly — but not too quietly, as this is Hollywood — shopping around for a new gig with the potential to make his soon-to-be-former bosses realize their mistake.

According to Bill Zwecker of the Chicago Sun-Times, ABC and Fox have been talking to Leno, but it's CNN who want to offer him "a late-night

Is CNN's ancient and clueless host Larry King on his way out? Metro columnist Rick McGinnis can only hope.

chatfest that could morph into Leno replacing Larry King." It's all in the realm of fantasy right now, apparently, and Leno could find himself growing old in his holding-pattern CNN show waiting to replace King, who was, after all, the first journalist to interview Marconi after his landmark first wireless broadcast between England and Newfoundland's Signal Hill in 1901, a seminal moment in the young journalist's career, albeit one that was captured for posterity on a zoetrope, as Marconi was, after all, just inventing broadcasting at the time.

I've never made a secret of my mystification at King's longevity at hosting soft-soap, often befuddled interviews with guests who are either friends and therefore very forgiving, or just openly bemused at the kindly but clueless old man on the other side of the table. The best King shows are inevitably the ones where some wary zookeeper brings a bunch of animals on the show, most of which — badgers, raccoons, even squirrels — King claims never to have heard of before. Leno, for all of his shortcomings, would be an improvement on an exponential scale.

Sex And The City, which enjoyed a stunning $56 million opening in North America, earned $39.2 million overseas, playing in key European territories as well as Turkey, Israel, Singapore, South African, Puerto Rico and Iceland. REUTERS

Coming out?

Lindsay Lohan has allegedly passed on an offer by OK! magazine to say she's gay. According to the New York Post's pagesix.com, insiders say that Lohan and OK! are in talks to do a cover where Lohan "comes out" about her relationship with gal pal Samantha Ronson, and the mag has offered her "around $1 million to do the cover." One source said, "Lindsay really wants this to happen and she needs the money." Lohan's rep however denies there's a deal, saying, "They sent offers and we passed." OK! said, "We don't comment on future editorial."

Rihanna wants to team up with Winehouse

R&B star Rihanna wants to record a "feminist anthem" for her next album with fellow chart-toppers Amy Winehouse and Duffy. According to femalefirst.co.uk, the hit-maker has drawn up a wish list of musicians and producers she wants to work with when she next hits the studio, with Winehouse, Duffy, and Winehouse-collaborator Mark Ronson right at the top. Rihanna talks of a 'dream team' with Winehouse and Duffy: "How amazing would that be? We've all got three different voices, it would be brilliant. Now that would be a feminist anthem. I love Amy. I think she's great, so unique. I love her album. And I also love what Duffy is doing, she's brilliant, as well."

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.
